TOUGH SPOT

BATTLE FLAME NO. 22

Elaine Edwards, as a U.S. Navy nurse finds herself a prisoner of the Chinese Reds in this scene from Allied Artists' "Battle Flame," opening ..... at the ..... theatre. The picture, produced by Lester A. Sansom, relates a thrilling chapter of the U.N. police action in Korea and stars Scott Brady, Miss Edwards and Robert Blake.

UNSPEAKABLE NURSE PERIL SUBJECT OF ACTION FILM

(Advance)

"Battle Flame," with a cast of thousands and a billion dollars worth of blazing equipment that roars across sky, ocean, and land, opens ..... at the ..... theatre.

The Allied Artists action picture deals with a fluke of war that put pretty American nurses as captives of a ruthless, woman hungry foe during the fighting in Korea.

With Scott Brady, Elaine Edwards and Robert Blake heading the cast, the film tells of a platoon of Marines that stops its forced retreat to the coast, following the Chinese breakthrough, to go to the rescue of a band of nurses held prisoner following the downing of their transport plane.

One of the high points in the gripping drama comes when, following the enemy commander's singling out the most beautiful nurse (Elaine Edwards) as his own intimate prize of war, the small Marine unit smashes into town, driving off the enemy and saving the nurses.

Few pictures have ever put on the spectacular show of America's military might that serves as the backdrop for this stirring adventure film.

It was directed by R. G. Springsteen, whose cast included Wayne, Heffley, Gordon Jones, Ken Miller, Arthur Walsh, Richard Harrison, Gary Kent, Peggy Moffitt, and Jean Robbins.

Lester A Sansom was the producer, for whom Elwood Ullman wrote the screenplay.

Brady Bucks Star Trend

Most Hollywood stars have either turned producer or are toying with the idea of doing so, but not Scott Brady. He has tried it himself, and as a result condemns it as a development that is bad for the film industry.

"Actors aren't businessmen," said Brady, who co-stars with Elaine Edwards in Allied Artists' action drama, "Battle Flame," story of pretty American nurses rescued by U.S. Marines from woman hungry captors during the Korean war. It opens next ..... at the ..... theatre.

"Actors doubling as businessmen — and producers as show-businessmen — are no longer actors at their best," contends Brady. "Acting is a demanding, exacting job, and an actor who divides himself with producing is only half an actor."

Brady's "Battle Flame" was produced by Lester A. Sansom and directed by R. G. Springsteen. Robert Blake has a top featured role.

THE STORY

(Not for Publication)

First Lieut. Frank Davis (Scott Brady) commands a United States Marines platoon in Korea. The platoon members include Second Lieut. Welchsler (Richard Harrison), a determined young soldier who goes by "the book;" Corp. Pacheco (Robert Blake), an ex-truck driver; Sgt. Dan McKelvey (Gordon Jones), a rugged career marine; Orlando (Ken Miller), a former cook; Teach (Wayne Heffley), ex-college athlete, and Nawlins (Arthur Walsh), who never lets anyone forget he's a Southerner. Davis is wounded, permitting him to resume a romance with Nurse Mary Ferguson (Elaine Edwards), although she tells him she already is bethrothed to a Navy surgeon, Stoddard (Richard Crane). Eventually Davis returns to his outfit and soon learns that one of the planes carrying wounded Marines had been forced down in enemy territory and that five nurses, including Mary, were being held captive. Fighting their way through the streets of Chinyong, the Marines finally rescue the nurses and other prisoners. Once again, Mary and Davis meet. Their romance seems finally ended when Mary tells him that she has heard from her fiance, now in Korea, with whom she expects soon to be reunited. Davis contacts headquarters and is informed that enemy troops are on the march to recapture Chinyong and that he must immediately order a fighting retreat to Hungnam. The Marines and nurses start their treacherous march to the sea through snowy, mountainous terrain. The advancing Chinese hordes continue their sporadic offensive moves which culminate in an all out attack on the retreating Marines. Most of the Marines' equipment is destroyed and casualties are high, but eventually the 7th Fleet's big guns start a cover bombardment which enables survivors to complete their escape. Davis finally meets Stoddard. The doctor tells Davis that he knows all about him and Mary and realizes that Davis, not he, is the man with whom Mary is in love. The surgeon now bows out, leaving Frank and Mary facing a hopeful future.

Cold Spot Sees Hottest Action

California's town of Bridgeport, popular movie location in the High Sierras and center of the cold weather survival training for the armed forces, claims that it and not International Falls, Minn., is the coldest spot in the United States.

The town was recently headquarters for Allied Artists' action drama, "Battle Flame," starring Scott Brady and Elaine Edwards. The film deals with the rescue of pretty American nurses from a woman hungry enemy during the Korean war. The film opens ..... at the ..... theatre, with Robert Blake in a key role.

Bridgeport, which is more than a mile high and sometimes snowbound for months, contends that its claims will be verified if and when the United States Weather Bureau ever makes official readings there.

Its snow and mountains match up perfectly with Korea's, according to "Battle Flame" Producer Lester A. Sansom and Director R. G. Springsteen.

NEW HAZARD

For the first time since the Greek myths, young and pretty women, members of armed services, may appear in combat areas. Their hazards of capture are shown in Allied Artists' "Battle Flame," starring Scott Brady and Elaine Edwards, and now at the ..... theatre. The film, with Robert Blake in a key role, was directed by R. G. Springsteen for Producer Lester A. Sansom.

SADISTIC

UNBELIEVABLE POWER

Enough explosive and projectile power to destroy New York City three times over is seen in Allied Artists' "Battle Flame," starring Scott Brady and Elaine Edwards, which shows the rescue of pretty nurses from primitive captors. The film, now at the ..... theatre, with Robert Blake in a key role was produced by Lester A. Sansom and directed by R. G. Springsteen.

'BATTLE FLAME' TENSE DRAMA OF NURSES' RESCUE IN KOREA

(Review)

"Battle Flame," Allied Artists adventure film that opened yesterday at the .....theatre, is an exciting slice of "now it can be told" drama about the Korean war, the peril of capture that was faced by young and alluring American nurses from a strange and rapacious enemy.

All members of the family should find gripping entertainment in this swiftly paced story of a small band of nurses and how they were saved by the smashing rescue drive of an isolated handful of U.S. Marines.

Scott Brady, as the commander, and Elaine Edwards, as one of the nurses, as well as the enthralling drama itself, have won critical acclaim at prior showings throughout the country. Such plaudits are richly earned.

Built on some of the most spectacular production values ever seen, with thousands of men and machines in furious action before the cameras, the story projects a tension that mounts from the opening scene to a shattering climax in a finale that stirs the emotions as both the goals of battle and romance are won.

Despite fast pacing and tension, Director R. G. Springsteen has been able to weave in some of the best comedy of the year, especially with the Southern accent and mannerisms of slack jawed Arthur Walsh, whose humor won him fame in nightclubs.

The drama is played against the historic flood of Chinese troops that swept down the Korean peninsula, threatening the whole U.S. Army with capture.

Brady is in command of a Marine unit that interrupts its forced retreat to go to the aid of a Navy plane, down in the mountains with nurses aboard. He brings convincing toughness to his role.

Miss Edwards, intelligent as well as beautiful, is authentic as head nurse. After being cut off, the Marines smash to the coast and safety aboard waiting transports.

Robert Blake gives strong support to the stars. Others in the cast are Richard Harrison, Gordon Jones, Ken Miller, Wayne Heffley, Gary Kent, Peggy Moffitt, Jean Robbins, Richard Crane, and Guy Prescott.

"Battle Flame" was produced by Lester A. Sansom from Elwood Ullman's screenplay.

Acting Risky, Claims Star

Korean P.O.W's

Spot Korean P.O.W's on television and radio interviews at least one week prior to the film's opening. Their treatment at the hands of the Chinese Reds will make interesting listening. Stress the Red's "brain-washing" technique, explaining that in the film a group of U.S. Navy nurses endured a similar experience. These ex-service men will also make good newspaper copy.

Veterans' Groups

Solicit the support of the various veterans' groups in your area, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, etc. Send special invitations to the commanders of these organizations asking them to be your guests on opening night.

Disc Jockeys

"Semper Fidelis" and the Marine Hymn are two of the most popular of all the service tunes associated with the U.S. Marines. The former is their marching song and the latter, their official tune. Contact disc jockeys and give them theatre tickets to give away as contest prizes, the contest to be tied in with the picture.

Front and Lobby

Give your theatre front and lobby a patriotic atmosphere by draping our national colors around the marquee and display frames. The colorful three sheet poster showing a navy nurse in the hands of the Chinese Reds will make an exciting lobby piece when cut out and surrounded with panels of production stills.

Navy Nurses

Through your Veterans' organizations try and find any local girl who served as a nurse during the United Nations' action in Korea. The capture of a group of Navy nurses by the Chinese Reds forms an important part of the story line. Spot her on radio and TV interview shows as well as getting her local newspaper breaks.

Borrow military gear and equipment for your lobby and theatre front. If a Marine base happens to be in your area, you may be able to arrange for a parade to your theatre.

Marine Corps League

Alert the Marine Corps League, a civilian organization with branches all over the country, to your "Battle Flame" engagement. They may also be instrumental in establishing contacts with the local Marine officer to arrange for their cooperation and your opening night festivities.

Recruiting Drive

Contact your nearest U.S. Marine Recruiting Office. They may be willing to set up a "branch" recruiting office in your lobby. Obtain their permission to use one of their recruiting "A" boards in front of your theatre with a "Battle Flame" poster on one side.

Special Guests

Your local Marine office may be able to give you the names of any Korean heroes living in your vicinity. If you get their names and addresses, send them special invitations to be your guest on opening night.
